FOR NATIONAL DEFENSE—

Countering The Submarine BY REAR ADM. F. T. WARD, USN Commander Hunter Killer Force United States Atlantic Fleet

IN step with the Navy's continuous battle against the submarine threat, a new command was recently established in the Atlantic Fleet, integrating under one operational commander certain of

Rear Adm. Ward

the Atlantic Fleet's anti-submarine surface and air forces.
This command has been designated "Hunter
Killer Force, U.
S. Atlantic
Fleet." A "force-in-being" now slightly more than a year, and with the basic organizing and planning completed, it has developed into a full-fledged operating branch of the Atlantic Fleet's organization.

The Navy felt that the existing fleet organization, insofar as hunter killer operations were concerned, was not adequate. Thus, since anti-submarine warfare has become one of the Navy's biggest problems, the conception and subsequent formation of HUKLANT is a great stride toward advancing the Navy's capabilities for combating hostile undersea craft.

In the latter part of World War II, hunter killer teams protected vital convoys and eventually became roving weapons hitting the enemy virtually at will in all parts of the Atlantic. The action of these teams proved to be an effective counterbalance against the overpowering Axis submarines and contributed materially to Allied victory in the Battle of the Atlantic. In the Eastern Atlantic in 1944, highlighting the results of these HUK teams, Capt. D. V. Gallery, USN, (now Rear Admiral) then commanding the escort carrier Guadalcanal, for the first time in our history, boarded and captured a German submarine, towing it home intact.

It is these same teams, the Hunter Killer Groups, much advanced in experience, technique and weapons, augmented by modern aircraft and electronic devices, that comprise HUKLANT today. It is an offensive weapon most important to our national defense and our ocean life-lines.
Its mission is unique—to seek the enemy submarines in ocean areas far from our shores and destroy them — most Naval units must try to avoid them.

On 27 Dec. 1951, Rear Adm. J. P. Whitney, USN, became HUKLANT's first commander. He was given maximum

Hearings Held on Davis Amendment As New Officer Promotion Bill Has Top Support

The House Armed Services Committee held hearings this week on a Department of Defense request for repeal of the Davis Amendment, as Chairman Dewey Short (R-Mo.) sponsored legislation which could result in a compromise decision.

The Committee heard Service spokesmen reiterate the drastic effects of the promotion rider at an opening hearing on 4 Feb. and a second go-round was scheduled for 6 Feb.

Meantime, in the face of Representative Glenn Davis' (R-Wisc.) statement that he would not endorse repeal of his amendment unless other legislation to control temporary promotions were voted, Chairman Short introduced a bill (H.R. 2332), which would require an annual estimate of officer promotions—permanent and temporary—for the next fiscal year.

Congressman Short at the Wednesday session urged that the Davis Amendment be rescinded as quickly as possible.

Representative Davis, who attended the hearing, said he did not come there to apologize, but "to help overcome present conditions." He emphasized that he had no intention to force demotions, but insisted that tighter control of officer promotions by Congress is essential.

The Services are likely to ask that some leeway be provided in the matter of distributions in grade and promotions, for a sudden change in world conditions, requiring a quick expansion of the Services or a rapid reduction in forces, would obviously upset promotion estimates and could lead to difficulties.

As the situation now stands, officer promotion plans are carefully reviewed at the Service Secretary and Department of Defense level in the Pentagon, at the Bureau of the Budget and finally by the Appropriations Committees.

Congressman Short apparently wants to prevent any further promotion legislation by appropriation bill rider. To this end, his bill states:

"That upon the submission of annual requests for appropriations for pay of military personnel, the Secretary of the Army, the Secretary of the Navy and the Secretary of the Air Force shall present to the Committee on Armed Services of the House of Representa-

INCENTIVE PAY

The technical staff of the Department of Defense Incentive Pay Commission has been instructed to submit a final draft of the report to Chairman Lewis L. Strauss by 8 Feb.

It can be anticipated that Admiral Strauss will quickly transmit the document to Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson, since it has been reported that the Commission members are in unanimous agreement on conclusions and recommendations.

Then, Mr. Wilson will send the report to the Senate Armed Services Committee, either with or without his own comments.

New Team Assumes Services' Leadership

The transition period, begun on 5 Nov. ended on 5 Feb. at the Pentagon when the new Defense Team went into action.

Following a swearing in ceremony at the White House on 4 Feb., the Secretaries of the Army, Navy and Air Force reported the next day for their first official service, although all have been receiving briefings for many weeks.

Here is the new line-up of civilian officials.

Department of Defense

As THE JOURNAL went to press, two Assistant Secretaries remained to be sworn in to join Secretary Charles E. Wilson, Deputy Secretary Roger M. Kyes and Assistant Secretary, Comptroller, W. J.
McNeil, a rear admiral in the Naval Reserve, who served as Acting Secretary of Defense until Mr. Wilson was confirmed and sworn into office. Mr. McNeil has served as Assistant Secretary under all five Secretaries of Defense.

The two Assistant Secretaries are President John A. Hannah of Michigan State College, who replaces former Assistant Secretary Anna M. Rosenberg as the Department's manpower expert, and Frank C. Nash, who has served in the Department as Director of International Affairs.

Advancement of Mr. Nash to the rank of Assistant Secretary was recommended by former Secretary of Defense Robert A. Lovett. The post of Assistant Secretary for legislation will be abolished and the responsibilities of this office will be assumed by the General Counsel.

Army

A WWII colonel in the Quartermaster Corps, Robert T. Stevens is the new Secretary and the Under Secretary is Earl D. Johnson, who served first as Assistant Secretary and later as Under Secretary under former Secretary Frank Pace, jr., and who was Acting Secretary from 20
Jan. to 5 Feb.

Mr. Stevens told reporters on 5 Feb. that "the first order of business" would be to fill the two Assistant Secretary billetts.

Navy

The Navy Secretary is Robert B. Anderson, a Texas businessman and civic leader, and the Under Secretary will be Charles S. Thomas of California, a prominent West Coast businessman and active in the Navy League. Assistant Secretary for Air John F. Floberg will remain in that position.

Air Force

Harold E. Talbott, a WWI Service major and well-known businessman, is the new Secretary. At press time, an Under Secretary had not been officially designated, although it has been widely reported that Robert C. Sprague, a 1920
U.S. Naval Academy graduate and presi-

Planes Raid Wonsan; Lull in Ground Action

The foot soldier, braving below-zero weather in Korea this week, had a relatively slow time of it despite bristling action on both ends of the front Tuesday. Sabre jets continued their patrols along the upper rim of North Korea but encountered fewer enemy planes than in recent weeks. Fighter-bombers pestered enemy communications centers and targets along the front, but none of the raids was particularly broad in scope except on Saturday when carrier-based planes joined in blasting Wonsan, the important seaport and communications hub on the east coast.

Saturday's raid was the first all-out air and sea bombardment launched by the Seventh Fleet since last April. The battleship Missouri, flying the flag of Vice Admiral James T. Clark, Fleet Commander, threw 16-inch shells into enemy gun positions. Fighter-bombers from the carriers Oriskany, Kearsarge and Philippine Sea pounded communications lines, docks and underground industrial plants in the Wonsan area. Returning pilots reported a key bridge knocked out, a crane destroyed and many buildings in various stages of ruin. These reports later were amplified to include the destruction of 45 buildings, 48 other supply and troop shelters and other targets.

Twice this week, Sabre jets, flying up to the Manchurian border, failed to encounter battle with enemy MIG's. On one of these occasions, MIG's were spotted but failed to give fight before whirling back to their Manchurian sanctuary.

The Fifth Air Force reported from its headquarters in Korea that during the month of January, 40 MIG's were shot down from the sky, and probably seven others destroyed. Only two UN jets were destroyed. These totals give the Far East Air Force a better than 7-to-1 ratio over Red-jets during the entire war. Eighty F-86 jets were lost in aerial engagements to 583 Communist jets claimed destroyed, as well as 104 MIG's probably destroyed. The total UN air losses of planes from all causes were 700 through January. Nearly 600 of those losses were to enemy action, the remainder operational.

In a closely coordinated attack Tuesday, in which planes, tanks, artillery and infantry participated, UN troops on the western end of the line jumped off against an outpost. Within 15 minutes, their objective had been reached and the Chinese driven deep into tunnels dug for shelter against UN air attacks. The tunnels and trenches were blasted, and the position held until the raiders withdrew. An estimated 300 enemy troops were reported killed. In several respects, the raid resembled Operation Smack in its technique of "flattening" the enemy first with air, artillery and tank fire before moving the infantry in. The object of the raid was to destroy underground positions and force the enemy into the open. Observers called it a success.

Meanwhile, at the extreme other end of the front, North Koreans, operating in the Korean watershed, sent a full battalion against ROK defenders on a ridge northeast of the Punchbowl. The fighting progressed to the hand-grenade stage before the South Koreans rallied and pushed the invaders back. In the two and a half hour fight, some 55 enemy soldiers were estimated killed.

dent of a large Massachusetts electronics firm has been tapped for this position. There were reports of some difficulties with regard to the "conflicts of interest" problem which delayed confirmation of the nominations of Mr. Wilson and other Defense officials. The name of Mr. H. Lee White to be an Assistant Secretary of the Air Force has been mentioned.

The new Secretaries of the Army, Navy and Air Force held brief meetings with the press on their first day in office.

Navy Official Tells House Committee of Need To Repeal Davis Amendment Promotion Curb

Vice Adm. Laurence T. DuBose, USN, former Chief of Naval Personnel, went before the House Armed Services Committee this week to urge repeal of the Davis Amendment.

He acknowledged that errors had been made in submitting data on the number of officers in various ranks and said that unless the promotion rider is altered 4,691 officers will not receive scheduled promotions and 5,400 other officers will be reduced in rank from lieutenant to lieutenant (jg).

Following is the text of Admiral DuBose's statement:

"As you know, Section 634 of the Department of Defense Appropriation Act for Fiscal Year 1953 sets limitations on the numbers of commissioned officers in each of several grades who may be paid during the last quarter of Fiscal 1953. I regret to report that the effect of Section 634 on the Navy will be far more drastic than the apparent intent of the Congress.

"During the floor debate in April 1952 on various versions of what became Section 634 the sponsor described the objective as a slow down in rates of promotion in commissioned ranks in the Armed Services, but not to cause widespread demotions. To provide a guide in attainment of this objective the Bureau of Naval Personnel was asked to furnish estimates of the number of officers in each grade expected to be on active duty on 30 June 1953. We furnished estimates based on personnel plans for Fiscal Year 1953, prepared in the Summer of 1951. It since has become clear that they were greatly in error.

"Computations and plans affecting officers of the Regular Navy only are exact because we can predict accurately when and how changes will occur. At present, when we are releasing Reserve officers as they complete their required service and recalling other Reserve officers to meet the needs of the service, we are in a process of simultaneous mobilization and demobilization. Predictions as of a date in the future of the numbers of officers in each of the grades in this very fluid population are subject to great variation because of the many uncertainties in the field of recalls, releases and seniority of reserve officers. In addition, these rapid and unpredictable variations introduce errors in the statistics produced by our personnel accounting procedures, which are cleared only by careful audit some time after the fact. The net result is that the actual numbers of officers in the grades affected by Section 634 will be much greater than our early estimates. If you desire a more detailed analysis of the foregoing I shall be glad to furnish it.

"In all, the rank status of 10,091 officers is affected. 4,691 of these officers will not receive the promotions which they would have attained in the normal course of events, and 5,400 other officers will be reduced in rank from Lieutenant to Lieutenant (jg). By ranks, the effects can be summarized as follows:

- "(a) There will be no change in the previously planned promotions to Flag rank.
 - "(b) The limitations do not materially affect planned promotions to Captain.
 - "(c) We had planned to promote 1,972 officers to Commander. Section 634 permits only 522 promotions, or a net decrease of 1,450.
 - "(d) Instead of the planned 2,598 promotions to Lieutenant Commander, the limitations allow 936, a decrease of 1,662.
 - "(e) Plans contemplated 1,582 promotions from Lieutenant (jg) to Lieutenant. These promotions cannot be made, and 5,400 present Lieutenants must be demoted to Lieutenant (jg)—a total of 6,982 officers affected.
- "The immediate effect on morale of these restrictions on promotions and of the impending demotions is obvious of course. An important but less obvious result is the impact on the young reserve officers and officer candidates who are considering career opportunities in the Navy. Currently, the small number of applications from those who are eligible for commissions in the Regular Navy is a matter of serious concern.

"Promotions in the Navy and the resulting numbers of officers in the various grades have been governed by the specific directives of Congress contained in the Officer Personnel Act.

"The limitations of section 634 cut across the principles of the Officer Personnel Act and the Career Compensation Act without relieving the Secretary of the Navy of his responsibilities under the two latter acts. Despite our best efforts it is entirely possible that in specific situations compliance with one law will involve us in literal violation of the other, and it is certain that compliance with Section 634 will involve negation of principles of the Officer Personnel Act.

"I have described briefly the administrative difficulties which made our estimates inaccurate. These same difficulties apply to actual compliance with Section 634—the application of rigid ceilings to a population which includes large numbers of reserve officers reporting for and being released from active duty requires much more precision in control than is feasible.

"I urgently request that early and favorable action be taken on the Bill H. R. 2332 and repeal of Section 634 of the Department of Defense Appropriation Act for Fiscal Year 1953."

New Promotion Bill

tives and the Senate, the estimated active-duty personnel requirements for his respective service for the next fiscal year, the estimated number of commissioned officers in each grade on active duty, whether by permanent or temporary appointment, to be promoted during the next fiscal year, and an analysis of the current distribution by grade of commissioned officers serving on active duty, whether by permanent or temporary appointment."

The last paragraph of Mr. Short's bill repeals Section 634 of Public Law 488, 82d Congress—that is, the Davis Amendment to the Appropriations Act.

The Department of Defense General Counsel, in sending to Congress legislation to repeal the Davis Amendment, said that the promotion limitation is a "serious impairment of sound long-range personnel planning."

The Pentagon statement warned that continuation of the restriction would have a serious effect on the number of Reservists in active service who are volunteering for extended duty.

It was pointed out that three out of every four officers in the active forces are Reservists. The Army ratio is 80% and the Air Force, 85%.

The drastic effect of the Davis Amendment was pointed up in the disclosure that 6,900 Navy officers in the ranks of lieutenant (jg), lieutenant and lieutenant commander would either not receive scheduled promotions in the current fiscal year or would be demoted. Of this number, more than 3,000 are Reserve officers.

"The Services are attempting to meet their officer needs by inducing Reserve officers to remain on active duty or to volunteer for active duty," the Department said. "It is obvious, however, that limiting opportunity for advancement will not make volunteer service attractive to the Reserve officer."

If the Davis Amendment is not rescinded, it was reported, the fixed percentage ratios will mean that some officers will be serving in positions of responsibility greater than their current rank, while others will have too much rank for their particular job.

Army Tells Data On Promotion Slow-Down

Army officials this week made available information which shows how the Davis Amendment has restricted officer promotions as Congress was told that this has had an adverse effect on morale.

It was pointed out, for example, that the original budget authorization for the current fiscal year provided for 5,400 colonels, but this number was reduced by the Davis Amendment to 5,199. In order to make certain that there is no violation of the Appropriations Act promotion rider, the Services must stay below the limitation; thus, there were 5,071 colonels on active duty as of 31 Dec. 1952.

To charges that the Army has too many generals, a spokesman related that Congress originally approved 520 generals, but as a result of the Davis Amendment and action by the Senate Armed Services Committee this limitation has been reduced to 500.

Although the number has gone down a bit since that date, there were 499 generals on active duty on 31 Dec., but of this number 88 were filling assignments not directly under Army control.

Since World War II, with the establishment of the Department of Defense and the delegation to the Army of worldwide responsibilities in assisting military forces of allied nations, a large number of general officers and colonels have been assigned duties outside of normal Army billets.

An Army spokesman told Pentagon reporters this week that the promotion of hundreds of officers has been delayed because of the Davis Amendment, particularly in the junior officer ranks.

Ft. Knox Meeting Calls For More Army Armor

The nation's outstanding authorities on the use of armor on the battlefield have called for organization of massed armor units into corps and even armored field armies.

At the annual meeting of the U.S. Armor Association last week at Ft. Knox, Ky., such experts as General Jacob L. Devers, USA-Ret., Lt. Gen. Willis D. Crittendenberger, USA-Ret., and Lt. Gen. Edward H. Brooks, USA, urged more emphasis on development and use of armor equipment.

General Crittendenberger, recently retired as Commanding General of the First Army at Governors Island, N. Y., was reelected president of the Association for the third consecutive year. Maj. Gen. Guy V. Henry, USA-Ret., was reelected honorary president.

Lt. Gen. Brooks

Armored Armies

General Brooks, Second Army commander, opened the session with an appeal for massed armor organizations to replace the present tank units scattered among infantry divisions.

General Brooks said that armored corps and, if necessary, armored armies, should be organized. "We can't afford to scatter shock through a lot of local divisions," he said in expressing the need for consolidation of tank units in their own organizations.

Greater mobility and simplicity of tank design were called for by General Devers, WWII chief of the Armored Force. Drawing a comparison with the building of airplanes, the former commander of the Sixth Army Group in France advocated the use of aircraft design and construction techniques to produce a lighter-weight tank.

"Here at Ft. Knox," said General Devers, "were developed great leaders of armor. Here the first integration of the fighting forces of the U.S. Army was conceived."

Sketching the work of Generals Van Voorhis and Chaffee, recognized as armor's founding fathers, he stated, "Here was the first fighting combat team of the Army. If we could only have the foresight to put together today a similar fighting team of the Army, Navy and Air Force—integrated and ready to go."

"Atomic firepower will be used some day," General Devers said, "but it will not eliminate armor; it will supplement and improve it."

Mobile Tanks

In speaking of tank construction, General Devers said the big problem today is excessive weight. Designing has been undertaken to "develop highly mobile, armored vehicles that are truly air transportable, amphibious and operational over all terrain."

He said the experience of the aircraft industry was borrowed to work toward these objectives in tank-making: "basic weight limit of 28,000 pounds or less; replacing tracks with wheels; eliminating the turret; and use of electric motor to drive and control wheels."

Host for the annual Armor Assn. gathering, Maj. Gen. J. H. Collier, Armored Center commanding general, dedicated the Court of Honor to the memory of the 16 armored divisions at a colorful ceremony. The Court consists of 16 plaques inscribed on stone markers listing the

"A Strong Fighting Service Ready for Any Contingency—"

FOLLOWING is the text of those portions of President Eisenhower's speech to Congress treating directly of the military services:

"Our labor for peace in Korea and in the world imperatively demands the maintenance by the United States of a strong fighting service ready for any contingency.

"Our problem is to achieve adequate military strength within the limits of endurable strain upon our economy. To amass military power without regard to our economic capacity would be to defend ourselves against one kind of disaster by inviting another.

"Both military and economic objectives demand a single national military policy, proper coordination of our armed services, and effective consolidation of certain logistics activities.

"We must eliminate waste and duplication of effort in the Armed Services.

"We must realize clearly that size alone is not sufficient. The biggest force is not necessarily the best—and we want the best.

"We must not let traditions or habits of the past stand in the way of developing an efficient military force. All members of our forces must be ever mindful that they serve under a single flag and for a single cause.

"We must effectively integrate our armament programs and plan them in such careful relation to our industrial facilities that we assure the best use of our man-power and our materials.

"Because of the complex technical nature of our military organization and because of the security reasons involved, the Secretary of Defense must take the initiative and assume the responsibility for developing plans to give our nation maximum safety at minimum cost. Accordingly, the new Secretary of Defense and his civilian and military associates will, in the future, recommend such changes in present laws affecting our defense activities as may be necessary to clarify responsibilities and improve the total effectiveness of our defense effort.

"This effort must always conform to policies laid down in the National Security Council.

"The statutory function of the National Security Council is to assist the President in the formulation and coordination of significant domestic, foreign, and military policies required for the security of the Nation. In these days of tension, it is essential that this central body have the vitality to perform effectively its statutory role. I propose to see that it does so. ***

"While retaliatory power is one strong deterrent to a would-be aggressor, another powerful deterrent is defensive power. No enemy is likely to attempt an attack foredoomed to failure.

"Because the building of a completely impenetrable defense against attack is still not possible, total defensive strength must include civil defense preparedness. Because we have incontrovertible evidence that Soviet Russia possesses atomic weapons, this kind of protection becomes sheer necessity.

"Civil Defense responsibilities primarily belong to the state and local governments—recruiting, training and organizing volunteers to meet any emergency. The immediate job of the federal government is to provide leadership, to supply technical guidance, and to continue to strengthen its civil defense stockpile of medical, engineering and related supplies and equipment. This work must go forward without lag."

Permanent USN Rank

President Eisenhower has nominated 76 captains and 127 commanders for permanent appointment in those ranks. At the same time, he sent to the Senate the names of 255 captains and 471 commanders, both USN and USNR on active duty, for temporary promotion. All of the latter group are currently serving under interim appointments.

Almost 2,000 Navy officers were nominated for permanent promotion to the grade of lieutenant (jg), including 1,600 Line, 137 Supply Corps, 20 Civil Engineer Corps, 87 Medical Service Corps and 104 Nurse Corps. Waves in the group numbered 39 Line, two SC and two MSC.

Deadline on Claims

Claims covering loss of personal effects by personnel of the Army, Navy, Air Force or Marine Corps must be submitted by their survivors before 3 July 1953 if the death or loss occurred prior to 3 July 1952.

Payment of such claims is now permitted under the Military Personnel Claims Act of 1945 as amended by the 82d Congress. The article appearing on page 631 of THE JOURNAL of 24 Jan., detailing how Naval personnel are eligible and how to apply for such claims applies equally to personnel of the Army and Air Force.

Army personnel should request claim forms from the nearest post, camp or station claims officer or from the Branch Office, JAG, Ft. Holabird, Baltimore 19, Md.

MOWW Backs Pay

Concerned with the lack of interest by members of Congress in the proposed "Increased Military Pay Bill," has caused Maj. Gen. Melvin J. Maas, USMCR-Ret., to call the attention of the members of the Military Order of the World Wars to the mandate of its recent national convention calling for definite action by 83d Congress on the measure.

The Order is at loss to understand why the pay measures calling for an 8% increase for all components should languish in the committee files awaiting sponsorship and action.

General Maas points out that this apathy is hurting our efforts to encourage the young officers to adopt the military service as a career. "They cannot bring up families and enjoy the ordinary necessity on the present pay rates; there is a lack of interest on the part of reservists going into the regular establishment," said this announcement.

Col. Hartman, VC Chief

Medical Center to Honor

Famed Army Surgeon

Plans by Maj. Gen. Paul H. Streit, Commanding General of Walter Reed Army Medical Center to honor Col. William L. Keller, MC, USA, one of the Army's outstanding doctors, were announced this week.

General Streit has set up an annual lecture series honoring Colonel Keller to be presented at Walter Reed during the Army Surgeon General's meeting in March of each year.

Colonel Keller is today a consultant at Walter Reed. This position was created by an Act of Congress upon Colonel Keller's retirement in 1935 in order to keep available to the public service his mature professional judgment and long experience.

A national authority on thoracic surgery, Colonel Keller was Chief of Surgery at Walter Reed Army Hospital from 1919 until his retirement.

Dr. Francis D. Moore, Surgeon-in-Chief, Peter Bent Brigham Hospital, Boston, Mass., will deliver the first address on 19 March at 8 o'clock in the Center's Army Medical Service Graduate School auditorium.

The project committee includes Brig. Gen. Sam Seeley, Brig. Gen. James P. Cooney, and Col. James C. Kimbrough.

Promotion Plans

The Army was making tentative plans this week for the convening, probably early in March, of selection boards to recommend officers for temporary promotions to major and captain.

Insofar as line officers are concerned, the eligible list for advancement to major has been exhausted and the approximate 500 officers remaining on the eligibility list to captain are expected to be promoted this month.

During February, there will probably also be about 50 promotions to colonel and 145 to lieutenant colonel.

Chief Umpire For Snow Storm

Col. Edward H. Metzger of the New England Sub-Area has been named Chief Umpire for "Snow Storm," the Army's winter training exercise now underway at Camp Drum, N. Y., replacing Maj. Gen. Roderick R. Allen. Colonel Metzger was Chief Ground Umpire for Snow Fall last year.

Deputy Chief Umpire is Col. Stephen L. Nichols of Ft. Totten. The 70 umpires who will participate in "Snow Storm" are attending a two-week Umpire School at which members of Umpire Headquarters will serve as instructors.

MICROWAVE

In 1931, International Telephone and Telegraph Corporation became the world pioneer—the first to beam man's voice through space by microwave. Today microwave has become the fastest growing communications system for spanning mountains, swamps, rivers and other natural barriers without costly wire lines—a system that is virtually immune to storm damage. And today IT&T is still the recognized leader, with its greatly advanced “pulse time multiplex” method of microwave transmission. If your company is planning to set up, expand or replace its own cross-country communication system, look first to PTM microwave. This versatile, flexible, new method provides for multiple speech channels, unattended telegraph, telemetering, remote control and other signaling. PTM microwave is available through Federal Telephone and Radio Corporation, an IT&T manufacturing associate.

IT&T engineers successfully demonstrate first voice transmission by microwave, Calais to Dover, March 31, 1931.

Adm. Holloway Takes

Navy Personnel Reins

Vice Adm. James L. Holloway this week assumed his new duties as Deputy Chief of Naval Operations for Personnel and Chief of the Bureau of Naval Personnel.

At a meeting with the press on 2 Feb., the Navy's new manpower director said he likes personnel work very much and he considers the assignment a stimulating challenge. He noted that he had never known a time when the Navy "didn't have some pretty ticklish problems in personnel."

Queried about the progress of the Naval ROTC program which he fostered, Admiral Holloway expressed satisfaction with the manner in which it has been implemented. He said about 4,500 NROTC midshipmen have been commissioned in the Navy as a result of the program and that they are doing a "very excellent job." He said, "I have had them with me as midshipmen for two summers and have seen them at first hand. They are a very outstanding group."

Asked how the NROTC graduates compare with their opposite numbers from the Naval Academy, Admiral Holloway said the Navy doesn't try to compare them, that the instructors on board ship "don't know which is which."

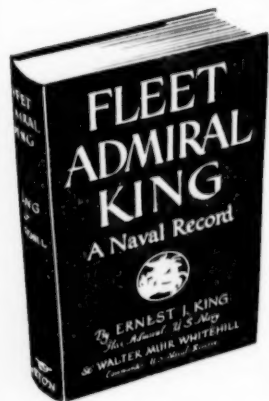

Rear Adm. R. N. Smoot, Assistant Chief of Personnel, appeared with Admiral Holloway at the press meeting and answered questions about Navy promotion procedures. He gave a brief historical sketch of the development of the promotion system, and discussed at some length the methods used by present-day selection boards in naming officers for higher rank.

Admiral Smoot said the procedures are sound, and "basically" they are "for the protection of the individual and the protection of the service."

Navy Board Meets

The Navy this week convened a selection board to name officers for promotion to lieutenant commander, Line.

Eligible officers are those male lieutenants of the Navy and Naval Reserve who have reported prior to 1 Jan. 1953 for active military service in excess of 30 days, Line officers Martin Olson, Signal No. 12283, or senior thereto for Regular officers, and Harold Lee Wagner, Register No. 58906 in the 1 Apr. 1951 Naval Reserve Register, or senior, for Reserve officers.

Eligible Staff Corps officers of the Regular Navy are those whose Line running mates are eligible as described above. Eligible Staff Corps officers of the Naval Reserve are those whose Register numbers in the 1 Apr. 1951 Naval Reserve Register are or are senior to SC 5017, MC 1715, ChC 675, CEC 1970, DC 1692, MSC 407.

Women Line and Staff Corps lieutenants of the Navy and Naval Reserve will not be considered by these boards, the Navy said. Information pertinent to boards for their selection will be promulgated at a later date.

Navy Pilots Train

In Fast Transports

Flight training in turbo-compound R7V-1 aircraft, the Navy's new ocean-spanning transport, began for 16 Navy pilots and flight engineers at Lockheed Aircraft Corp., Burbank, Calif., this week.

The program marks the Navy's most extensive delegation of initial flight training on a new model plane to a manufacturer at the source of production, the Navy said.

Personnel engaged in the program come from the VR-8 squadron of the Military Air Transport Service at Hickam Field, Hawaii, famed in the service for its role in the Berlin Airlift, and VR-1 which operates regularly scheduled fleet logistics routes across the Atlantic. Ground school of two to twelve weeks preceded flight in the new transport.

Approximately three weeks will be required for flight training at Burbank, to be followed by intensive indoctrination of 128 flight engineers and pilots at the headquarters of the operational units. The second phase of instruction will be undertaken by Navy personnel in conjunction with Lockheed pilots and flight engineers at the scene.

Classroom for the flight course will be the first production models of the R7V-1, military versions of the Super Constellation ordered by 13 world airlines. Speed of the Navy plane is classified, but was described as "approaching 400 mph."

First delivery of R7V-1's for operational use is scheduled for early April.

Lant Phibex II

The Atlantic Fleet Amphibious Force this week launched a large-scale training exercise—Lant Phibex II—to maintain the combat readiness of Navy and Marine Corps personnel and ships in the Atlantic Fleet.

Starting at Norfolk, Va., the exercise will extend into the Caribbean area, and end on the shores of North Carolina in early April. It is aimed at improving and testing communications, command relationships, tactical concepts and training methods. About 25,000 Navy personnel and 17,000 Marines, including aviation units of both services, are participating.

In over-all command of the operation is Vice Adm. F. G. Fahrion, Commander Amphibious Force, Atlantic Fleet. Marine ground troops taking part in the exercises are from Lt. Gen. Graves B. Erskine's Fleet Marine Force, Atlantic, and Marine aviation personnel and planes are from Air, FMF, Lant, commanded by Maj. Gen. Field Harris.

The first phase of the operation will be directly supervised by Rear Adm. L. J. Huffman, Commander Amphibious Group Four, and assisted by Rear Adm. R. E. Rose, Commander Amphibious Group Two.

Amphibious troops under the command of Maj. Gen. R. McC. Pate, Commanding General of the 2nd Marine Division, were embarked at Norfolk and Morehead City, N. C., and the task force departed for Vieques, Puerto Rico, where it will conduct an amphibious assault aimed at capturing that island, as a base for the second phase. The island is to be defended by a Marine training group now there for intensive field training.

The second phase will consist of the formation of a "Blue" amphibious task force at Vieques under the command of Admiral Fahrion, with troops commanded by General Erskine. The armada will include carriers, cruisers, destroyers, attack transports, attack cargo ships, submarines, rocket ships, auxiliary ships and air patrol squadrons. In all, over 150 ships and craft will participate.

The amphibious task force will load out from its base at Vieques (captured in Phase I) and move overseas to Onslow Beach, N. C., against "Black" submarines and air opposition. Air support will be supplied by Rear Adm. T. H. Robbins, jr., Commander Carrier Division Two. Air and anti-submarine warfare operations will be directed by Rear Adm. A. P. Storrs, III, Commander Carrier Division 16.

The "Black" or defending Naval Force will be commanded by Rear Adm. F. T. Watkins, Commander Mine Force, U.S. Atlantic Fleet. Working under Admiral Watkins will be a group of submarines under the command of Capt. R. H. Bass, Commander Submarine Squadron 10, and Naval and Marine air elements under Capt. C. W. Fielder, Staff of Commander Fleet Air Wings, U.S. Atlantic Fleet.

The attacking Marines will be from the Second Marine Division and Force troops, both based at Camp Lejeune, N. C. The air elements of the Marine Air Ground Team will be from the Second Marine Aircraft Wing based at Cherry Point, N. C. and from the Third Marine Aircraft Wing, Miami, Fla.

The exercise will end with a D-Day assault at Onslow Beach conducted under realistic conditions.

"The huge training program will enable the Marines to test doctrines for the use of new weapons and methods, especially the employment of helicopters in amphibious operations. It also will serve to polish up old techniques for the employment of the Marine Air Ground Team aimed at speeding up the whole sequence of amphibious operations ashore," a PhibForce announcement said.

Memorial Bridge Site For Iwo Jima Statue

A 100-ton, 110-foot statue, depicting the historic flag-raising on Iwo Jima during World War II, will be erected by the Marine Corps War Memorial Association near the Virginia end of the Lincoln Memorial Bridge in Washington, D. C., early in 1954.

Disclosure of the site was made by General Lemuel C. Shepherd, jr., Commandant of the Marine Corps, who said, "The sculpture on the large 35-ft. group of the Marine figures depicting the flag raising on Suribachi has been finished, and the figures are about 50 per cent cast in bronze."

General Shepherd said, "A splendid site near the Virginia terminus of the Lincoln Memorial Bridge has been selected and approved, and a design has been approved for the base of the statue." A small-scale model of the statue now stands at the entrance to the Marine Corps Schools, Quantico, Va.

Designed and executed by Felix de Weldon, the memorial is being erected in honor of the Marine Corps dead. In addition, according to General Shepherd, it will serve "to commemorate all of the multitude of valiant contributions that Marines have made during World War II and even before."

The Marine Commandant has asked all Marine commanding officers to join in a fund-raising campaign to complete the statue. The campaign is being conducted at all Marine posts and stations to raise $200,000 to handle expenses for 1953. This amount is expected to permit completion of the statue, and another $300,000 will be required to finish the entire memorial. It is expected that the monument will be ready for unveiling by May 1954.

CASTLE INSIGNIA

The Castle is used as a symbol of the military engineers because of the connection of medieval castles to the various phases of architecture and fortification. It was adopted by the Corps of Engineers in 1839.

authority and flexibility of action to set up a plan to utilize the forces available for a training program in hunter killer operations. During his command he succinctly reported: "We are ready for swift action against enemy submarines anywhere in the Atlantic—at any time."

Although the hunter-killer technique is one of the latest evolutions of undersea warfare, it is not regarded by the Navy as the complete answer to the submarine threat. On the contrary, the hunter-killer groups will find only those submarines which have escaped all other endeavors to destroy them. Vigorous bombing of submarine shipyards, mining of harbors and channels around submarine havens and reconnaissance and attack by long range patrol bombers like the P2V are all vital adjuncts to the role of the hunter-killers.

Many Types of Ships

HUKLANT forces include many types of ships and aircraft of the Atlantic Fleet. Permanently assigned are several of the escort carriers, destroyer squadrons, and anti-submarine (VS) aircraft squadrons which are now using the Grumman Guardian (AF). Submarines are used extensively for training the forces in ASW tactics. In addition, land-based patrol bombers and airships (lighter-than-air) are assigned to HUKLANT from time to time in order to develop further training in coordinated operations. Some 20,000 officers and men are assigned to the various units throughout the command.

This armada is split into Hunter Killer Groups. Each group consists of a carrier, its embarked VS squadron, and several destroyers. The destroyers, utilized as a protection to the carrier, also become part of the offensive team which moves in for the eventual kill after the sub's detection by aircraft search teams. The carriers become highly mobile bases from which the search aircraft can operate.

"Major Leaguers"

When Rear Adm. D. V. Gallery, USN, became HUKLANT's second commander early in 1952, he said he believed the pilots and aircrewmembers who fly off the "jeep" carriers around the clock in hunter killer operations, are the "major leaguers of Naval Aviation." The aircraft in the air are vitally important to the success of the group. They must make the initial detection over the vast expanses of the sea where the sub is likely to slip by undiscovered. For this reason hunter killer operations become hard work for all concerned. It is also tedious work burdened with the knowledge that in wartime, hours, days, and even weeks may pass with unsuccessful searching for the elusive target. In peacetime, however, intensive training for all HUKLANT forces insures "top notch" proficiency.

Currently, HUKLANT forces have actively participated in the combined NATO exercise MAINBRACE, recently completed in the Eastern Atlantic, and LONGSTEP in the Mediterranean. Maneuvres are now being conducted in the Caribbean area under the title SPRINGBOARD. These operations are designed to take the utmost advantage of favorable weather conditions in the West Indies waters, thereby permitting more extensive training than would be possible in Northern waters during the winter months. The writer, who took over as the third commander of HUKLANT in November of 1952, will board his flagship, the carrier, USS Salerno Bay, early in February, to observe advanced hunter killer training exercises during the SPRINGBOARD maneuvers.

Once termed the "baby command of the Fleet," HUKLANT has demonstrated itself a resourceful and capable force, confident of a brilliant future in Naval warfare.

Marine Reserve Board

A Reserve Selection Board was convened at Marine Corps Headquarters on 2 Feb. to consider for temporary promotion to captain some 1,200 Reserve first lieutenants.

Eligible are those who were not on extended active duty on 1 May 1952, when their regular running mates were considered for temporary promotion.

President of the board is Col. C. E. Shepard, Jr., USMC, former reserve district director at Los Angeles, Calif. Other members are Reserve Lieutenant Colonels Herbert D. Harries, Jr., and Frances W. Peppers; Majors Brooks E. Pierce, USMCR, William R. Holt, USMC, George B. Farish, USMC; and Capt. James Logan, Jr., USMCR. First Lieutenant Lonnie B. Sandifer, USMC, is recorder.

Wave Board Postponed

Reported changes in selection procedures for the promotion of Wave officers were nullified this week by the Bureau of Naval Personnel.

The Navy had announced on 30 Jan., that Wave officers would not be considered by a board now meeting to select officers for promotion to lieutenant commander. This gave rise to reports that all Wave selections would be divorced from male selections in the future, as a result of changed policy.

A BuPers spokesman pointed out, however, that "Wave boards always have been separate. Board members selecting male officers also serve on the Wave boards, but under a different precept." This is true, he noted, because of the different laws which govern the promotion of male and Wave officers.

The Navy is not holding a Wave selection board for promotion to lieutenant commander at this time, THE JOURNAL was informed, because the quota that could be established now is not as large as it may be possible to make it later in the Spring. In the meantime, it is anticipated that two Wave lieutenant commanders may resign their commissions, thereby adding at least two numbers to the proposed quota.

What the quota will be was not made known. However, the Navy is operating at present with 44 less Wave lieutenant commanders than it is authorized by law. Slightly more than one thousand Wave officers are currently on active duty with the Navy. Twenty per cent (201) of this number are authorized in the grade of lieutenant commander, although only 157 are serving in that rank at present.

It was noted by observers, however, that the Waves are also authorized 10 per cent of their total officer strength in the grade of commander, whereas only little more than one per cent are so serving. The last selection board for Wave officers named only two for promotion to commander, making a total of 12 on active duty—six USN, six USNR.

The Army, with approximately the same number of women officers on active duty, has 25 Regular and five Reserve lieutenant colonels, and 243 majors. The Air Force, with a slightly smaller force of women, has 37 lieutenant colonels and 143 majors.

Comparative figures for women on active duty in the three military services are as follows:

	Navy	Army	Air Force
Col-Capt	1	1	1
LtCol-Comdr	12	30	37
Maj-LtComdr	157	243	143

Reconn. Wing Redesignated

The 111th Strategic Reconnaissance Wing (H) based at Fairchild AFB, Wash., has been redesignated the 99th Strategic Reconnaissance Wing (H).

Col. S. E. Manzo, commander of the 111th wing since November of 1951 assumed command of the 99th with Col. Edward D. Edwards as the Deputy Commander.

The 111th wing designation has been returned to its former status as part of the Pennsylvania Air National Guard stationed near Philadelphia. The 111th was federalized in April 1951 and progressed in types of aircraft assigned from B-26s to RB-29s and finally to RB-36Fs in a year and a half. Personnel of the Guard unit who were on active duty were released to return home during the period of July through December of 1952.

The change of name came as the Wing entered the final phase of its conversion program that began several months ago changing the Wing from an RB-29 to an RB-36 unit.

Gen. Landry Transfer Change

Maj. Gen. Robert B. Landry, USAF, who was Air Force aide at the White House for former President Truman, has been named to be deputy commander of the Second Air Force, Barksdale AFB, La. Previously, it was announced that General Landry would be deputy commander of the Fifteenth Air Force at March AFB, Calif.

Maj. Gen. Archie J. Old, Jr., USAF, has been relieved from assignment as Second Air Force deputy commander and will report by 18 Feb. at Strategic Air Command Headquarters, Offutt AFB, Nebr., to be SAC Deputy Director of Operations.

Brig. Gen. Robert H. Terrill, USAF, presently at Fifteenth Air Force Headquarters, has been relieved from assignment as SAC Deputy Director of Operations and will be Deputy Commander of the Fifteenth Air Force.

AB Wing In Azores

Plans for changes in the structural framework of the Azores Air Transport Station (1605th AB Gp) materialized 1 Feb. when the group was formally expanded and designated the 1605th Air Base Wing.

The necessity to enlarge the organizational framework of the group to Wing level became apparent two years ago when Lajes began to bulge at the seams. As time passed, commanding officers of the various base sections found themselves burdened more and more with additional duties and activities until it reached the stage where it no longer was possible to properly supervise and coordinate the many diversified activities.

Exact figures on the expansion are classified, but during the past year alone, over 30,000 additional passengers were handled than during the preceding year. While the number of aircraft handled increased only a few hundred over 1951, the increased payloads and complexities of the newer and larger planes placed a greater burden on all sections of the base.

Under the new set-up, Col. H. L. Smith, commanding officer, will be in charge of three groups and eight squadrons. Lt. Col. William E. Taylor's Air Base Gp. will consist of the Air Base, Air Installations, Operations and Traffic and Air Police squadrons. The Maintenance and Supply Group, under the direction of Lt. Col. Lawrence H. Avila, includes the Maintenance Sq., Supply Sq., and Motor Vehicle Sq. under its jurisdiction. Maj. Vincent Marchese will command the Medical Group. Military personnel administration will be consolidated within each group headquarters instead of at squadron level.

DESTROYER SANK CRUISER

The Navy destroyer USS Fletcher was the only ship of its type in World War II to sink a Japanese heavy cruiser without the help of other ships.

Train Test Pilots

The Air Force announced this week establishment of an Experimental Test Pilot School and said that officers currently on flying status as pilots may now apply for experimental test pilot training if they possess the qualifications outlined in a new Air Force regulation.

Air Research and Development Command Headquarters at Baltimore, Md., said the school will be located at the Air Force Flight Test Center, Edwards AFB, Calif., one of nine research, development and testing centers of the ARDC. The school is designed to maintain the Air Force's capability for experimental flight testing at the high level of proficiency required for successful development of new USAF aircraft.

In the past, the training of experimental flight test pilots was an additional function of the Flight Test Center to provide capable test pilots from within the Air Research and Development Command. Under the new plan this function has been converted into a USAF school and is open to all Air Force pilots who qualify under the requirements established by Air Force Regulation 53-19, 19 Jan.

Students at the school will receive a 24-week course of training, enabling them to conduct flight tests on experimental and production-type aircraft to determine flight characteristics, performance, stability, and functional utility. They will also obtain technical information on serviceability and functioning of installed equipment and component parts.

Applicants for the school must be rated pilots currently on flying status with 1,500 hours of diversified flying time. In addition, the pilots should be between the ages of 25 through 30 and possess a knowledge of college algebra, plane geometry, differential calculus, theory of flight, aeronautical mechanics, and aerodynamics.

Reserve officers may attend the school, providing they sign a service statement which requires them to remain on extended active duty for a period of at least three years following completion of training.

The 15 students composing the final class under the old system will complete their training in March. As classes under the reorganized set-up are on a quarterly basis, the first new class will start its sessions in April.

Applicants should refer to the USAF Training Prospectus as well as AFR 53-19 for complete information. An application form is attached to the regulation.

Members of other United States Government agencies, civilian contractor pilots, and officers nominated by foreign governments are also eligible, and may attend on a space available basis as approved by the Commandant, USAF Experimental Flight Test Pilot School, and Headquarters USAF.

O.K. Limestone Housing

Construction will begin in March on 1,500 family housing units at Limestone AFB, Me.

The Wherry Units will be divided as follows: 990 for airmen and civilians with rentals from $71 to $91; and 510 for officers and civilians with rentals from $89 to $125 monthly.

New ADC Staff Chaplain

Chaplain (Col.) William W. Sissel, has been assigned as Staff Chaplain for the Air Defense Command at ADC Headquarters, Ent AFB, Colo.

In December 1951, Chaplain Sissel was sent to the 5th Air Force, Korea, as Staff Chaplain and received his present assignment upon returning from overseas.

MATS 10,000th Flight

The Military Air Transport Service, 28 Jan., sent on its way from Westover AFB, Mass., the command's 10,000th trans-Atlantic flight since 1 Jan. 1950.

Brief ceremonies immediately prior to the plane's departure for Rhein Main Air Base, Germany, were attended by civilian and military dignitaries, including Lt. Gen. Joseph Smith, MATS Commander, and Rear Adm. Hugh M. Goodwin, MATS Vice-Commander.

The aircraft used for the milestone flight was a Douglas C-118 Liftmaster (DC-6), newest addition to MATS transport fleet. The Rhein-Main trip was regularly scheduled Flight A-115 which makes one stop en route, at Lajes, Azores, for fuel. On the return hop to Westover, this flight is converted for air evacuation of medical patients to hospitals in the United States.

MATS officials explained that the 10,000 figure includes only those flights made between the Continental U. S. and England, Europe and Africa. This figure does not include flights which terminate at en route points such as the Azores and Kindley AFB, Bermuda, both stops in MATS trans-Atlantic runs. Neither does it include more than 7,000 flights to bases in Greenland and Iceland.

Westover was selected as the site of the commemorative ceremonies because the bulk of MATS Atlantic trips are flown by the 1600th Air Transport Wing, based there. The celebrated flight was operated by the 30th Air Transport Squadron.

Since 1 Jan. 1950, MATS has transported more than 300,000 passengers without fatality or serious injury, and airlifted more than 70,000,000 pounds of cargo and mail.

Others participating in the pre-takeoff ceremonies were Maj. Gen. James W. Spry, Commander, Atlantic Division MATS, and Col. Jack G. Merrell, Base Commanding Officer, Westover AFB.

Crew members on the 10,000th flight were: Aircraft Commander, Capt. Harry B. Winger; 1st Pilot, Capt. Frederick L. Dunn; 2d Pilot, 1st Lt. John A. Shields; Navigators, 1st Lt. Eugene B. Emett and 1st Lt. Samuel B. Rosenthal; Flight Engineer, S/Sgt. William M. Dalton and Radio Operators, A2/C John T. Allan and A2/C Stephen W. Tator, all assigned to the 30th Air Transport Squadron. Two other members of the crew, S/Sgt. Ruth Bloom and A/2C William A. Carrigan, Flight Traffic Specialists, are assigned to the 1600th Air Traffic Squadron at Westover.

$11.6 Million For AFR Facilities

Construction of new facilities for Air Force Reserve training will begin soon at 10 air bases in various parts of the United States.

Approximately $11,685,000 of funds authorized by Public Law 155, 82d Congress, have been released by the Bureau of the Budget for this purpose.

This amount will be turned over to the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, construction agency for the Air Force, to prepare final plans and specifications and let contracts for the new Reserve training facilities.

The ten locations, and the amounts released by the Budget Bureau for each, are: Dobbins AFB, Marietta, Ga., $687,000; Ellington AFB, Houston, Tex., $415,000; Laurence G. Hanscom Field, Bedford, Mass., $1,965,000; Niagara Falls Municipal Airport, New York, $1,797,000; Memphis Municipal Airport, Tenn., $6,000; Scott AFB, Belleville, Ill., $1,041,000; Selfridge AFB, Mount Clemens, Mich., $1,554,000; Hamilton AFB, San Rafael, Calif., $704,000; Hensley Field, Grand Prairie, Texas, $97,000 and Grandview Air Terminal, Kansas City, Mo., $3,419,000.

Davis (right), director of armament for the Air Force Air Research and Development Command at Baltimore, with G-E engineer Bernard Geyer. The center section of the OARAC, containing operations panel and high-speed input and output tape mechanisms, is flanked on either side by row after row of plug-in turrets which contain most of the 1,400 tubes and 7,000 diodes used in the giant computer. It will go into regular operation at the Flight Research Laboratory, Wright Air Development Center, Dayton, Ohio. OARAC will save research and development time, equipment and money by eliminating much costly flight testing of experimental aircraft equipment.

General Completes Jet Study

Brig. Gen. Benjamin J. Webster has completed an intensive 11-day study of jet fighter-bomber techniques and tactics at Luke AFB, Ariz., preparatory to his new assignment overseas training Turkish pilots to fly F-84's.

General Webster was graduated from West Point in 1932 and served as squadron officer in Hawaii from 1933-1937. Later, he was assigned for three years as instructor-pilot at Kelly AFB, Tex., until he went back to West Point to teach physics. During 1943, he headed the air training program at the U. S. Military Academy, and later was attached to a fighter wing with the Eighth Fighter Command in England and Belgium.

Prior to his current assignment as Chief of the Air Force Group, Joint American Military Mission for Aid to Turkey, General Webster was director of Management Analysis in the Comptroller's Office at Air Force Headquarters, Washington, D. C.

"We must be strong in arms. We must be strong in the source of all our armament—our productivity."— PRESIDENT EISENHOWER.

More Unification. President Eisenhower's message to Congress makes it perfectly clear that he and his Secretary of Defense, Charles E. Wilson, will make an intensive effort to bring about greater unification of the Services and consolidation of certain additional functions. This thinking was forecast in the General's campaign speech in Baltimore last September when he declared that unification has been "too much form and too little substance" and that three services instead of two are "still going their separate ways."

Now, in Monday's speech he speaks of "proper coordination of our Armed Services and effective consolidation of certain logistic functions," and says that we must "eliminate duplication of effort," and, again, "we must effectively integrate our armament programs."

To accomplish this, and his other plans for the military services, the President is depending directly upon his new Secretary "to take the initiative and assume the responsibility."

Mr. Wilson, being a man of action, we may look forward to early moves toward more top-side control of the separate Services and perhaps an effort to restrict their independence. At any rate, it appears certain that there will be further consolidations of activities related to procurement and supply. Whether this will be done in one fell swoop or will await professional studies by the Joint Chiefs of Staff and the military personnel of the Services remains to be seen.

Operation Smack. Thanks to the level-headed actions of the new Chairmen of the Senate and House Armed Services Committees and the prompt and clear explanation presented by the Army Chief of Staff, General J. Lawton Collins, the tempest over "Operation Smack" has simmered down and now can be seen in true perspective. It was no different from hundreds of other small unit combat raids that have been conducted throughout the war. The fact that there were visiting generals to witness it and that they were guided in their observations by carefully drawn up sets of operational plans should not be taken to mean that it was a "show," but rather that the leaders over there are taking every precaution to study tactics at close hand so that they can change and improve them as actual combat experience shows necessary. That this particular operation was unsuccessful means that lessons have been learned which will be helpful in planning others. Unfortunately a bad public reaction resulted initially because, as General Collins put it, some "eager beaver" had put an ornate cover on the sets of operational plans, adding a "Hollywood" touch.

A most satisfying and significant phase of the temporary tumult over "Operation Smack" was the way Senator Leverett Saltonstall and Representative Dewey Short, the new committee chairmen, handled the charges. Both reserved judgment and calmly went about getting the facts, smoothing ruffled members, and cautioning Congress and the Nation not to jump to conclusions but to wait for the full story. Such a careful attitude augurs well for their conduct of those important committees in the 83d Congress.

Family Care. As reported on the opposite page, Dr. Melvin A. Casberg, chairman of the Armed Forces Medical Policy Board, is urging that the doctor draft law and the question of

Diminishing Returns

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

Please add my resounding "Amen" to the words by "Wife of a Marine Corps Colonel now in Korea" on the subject of "Household Poundage Allowances" as printed in your 17 Jan. issue.

Congressional thinking has developed along such a curious line that a man can no longer "afford" to enter the Service of his country unless he has (or anticipates no more than) only two children in his family. There is no sane reason why Congress should penalize those Servicemen whom God has seen fit to bless with more than two children. If Congress has recently become alarmed over "desertions" and "irregularities" in the Services let it not point an accusing finger at former president Truman or the Korean War, but rather let it examine its own breaches of faith with the Serviceman over the past decade.

A career in the Service once offered a reasonable amount of security in return for the security of this nation's defenses. But over a period of years Congress has seen fit to "economize,"—at the expense of the Serviceman and what little security he was promised when he chose the Service as a career.

Medical and dental aid for dependents, commissary and post exchange privileges, adequate housing, retirement at the end of 20-30 years, a reasonable consideration of children with regard to schooling, income tax deductions, movement of or supplying of household goods; all of these promises have been broken in whole or in part during the past ten years. How many more, Congress? There's not much left to take away!

When my husband applied for his Regular Commission we did not for one moment anticipate a "soft job" or one of great wealth. We made the decision with our eyes open. But as the decade has passed, Congress has shoved us further into the quicksand of "diminishing returns." Even the most frugal of us (with more than one child) cannot, under present circumstances, ever hope to see any of our children attend college (unless these children are especially endowed with extraordinary mental abilities). With the expenses incurred in Service life we could not possibly save the cost of tuition for a private college; and by the time an Officer is 60-65 and eligible for retirement—and the establishment of a bona fide residence necessary for the entrance of his children in a State University—his children are well past the college age. A rosy future indeed for the coming generation!

The saddest part of all is that we find ourselves in the unique position of not being able to strike, or engage in collective bargaining, or maintain a lobby in Washington—or even have a Congressman! No politician fears the vote of the transient Serviceman's family!

Must we be satisfied with airing our gripes among ourselves and swallowing our bitterness quietly while Congress continues to "strike the man while he's down"?

All we ask is the maintenance of the standard of living as promised to us when we took on this job—we don't demand wealth. Unless something is done in this direction, Congress will probably find that the money it saves by "economizing" at our expense will not begin to cover the cost of its investigations of "desertions" and "irregularities" in the Armed Forces.

bring discontent and lower efficiency than almost anything else. That fact is known to every ranking officer of the line. On the other hand, from the standpoint of the medical services themselves the Surgeons General have repeatedly testified that their problem of getting and keeping doctors would be vastly complicated if medical practice in the Services had to be confined solely to young men.

IN THE JOURNAL

10 Years Ago—

Laying the blame for the present steel shortage at the doors of the armed forces, the big steel companies, and the War Production Board, the Senate Committee Investigating the National Defense Program stated, in a report just made public, that there is reason to believe there will be barely sufficient steel for major military purposes during 1943, and that civilian industries will continue to suffer.

50 Years Ago—

With the incorporation of the United States Navy League on 27 Dec. 1902, there was instituted what will be, if it succeeds, one of the most important educational movements ever undertaken in this country. The League proposes to educate the people in naval affairs and to enlist their support in behalf of a policy which shall insure more ships, more officers and men, better training, and a great naval reserve.

85 Years Ago—

According to the Navy Register for 1868, there were on the active list 1 admiral, 1 vice admiral, 9 rear admirals, 24 commodores, 49 captains, 90 commanders, 136 lieutenant commanders, 45 lieutenants, 29 masters, 52 ensigns, 157 midshipmen, 80 surgeons, 42 passed assistant surgeons, 28 assistant surgeons, 80 paymasters, 39 passed assistant paymasters, 26 assistant paymasters, 50 chief engineers, 88 first assistant engineers, 131 second assistant engineers, 18 chaplains, and 11 professors of mathematics.

Dissatisfied Army?

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

Because of recent personal experience it doesn't surprise me to find letters from readers in THE JOURNAL frequently bitterly criticizing the operation of the Army promotion system and revealing the bad effect it is having on the morale of many fine officers who have been passed over on promotion lists.

Mrs. Anna M. Rosenberg seems to have been acutely aware of this and greatly concerned about it when she warned in her final report of "a growing lack of confidence in the military service as a career," and pointed out as one of the factors contributing to it a "lack of confidence in the promotion system and periods during which promotions are frozen or decreased to a trickle."

I heard confirmation of this in talking with a number of officers at both Ft. Sill and Ft. Knox, when I spent a few days at each place recently. Several of them told me that although they had been recommended for promotion and never had been rated less than superior on efficiency reports they had been "passed over" more than once—for what reason they couldn't understand or find out.

All the officers with whom I talked, including some satisfied with their progress in rank, felt that it was harmful to morale. All the dissatisfied ones said an Army career was their chief desire but they were determined to get out at the first opportunity.

It seems to me it would be wise and very simple for the Army to convene a special board to re-examine the cases of all men "passed over" or lost in the shuffling, and try to restore their confidence in the military service as a career.

The country has made a big investment in the training of West Pointers, especially, and it would be a shame to lose them.

A CONCERNED LAYMAN

Dependent Care Separate Problem

Medical Policy Council Chairman Expresses Hope That Dependent Care Will Not be Involved In Forthcoming Doctor-Draft Debate.

THE Chairman of the Armed Forces Medical Policy Council, Dr. Melvin A. Casberg, has appealed to the medical profession not to involve the problem of medical care for military dependents in the forthcoming debate on extension of the doctor-draft law. As has been reported in THE JOURNAL during recent months, the American Medical Association is expected to seek curtailment of dependent care in connection with hearings on the doctor-draft legislation. Civilian doctors may even attempt to barter on this issue.

The A.M.A. is known to have the conviction that if dependent care were curtailed or eliminated fewer doctors would have to be called for duty with the Armed Forces, although it is virtually unanimously conceded that some type of doctor-draft legislation is necessary.

To this approach, Dr. Casberg responds in an editorial published in the February issue of the U. S. Armed Forces Medical Journal that "the doctor-draft law must be settled on its own merits." He says that "the introduction of dependent care into the debate will serve only to cloud the issue inasmuch as the latter is a distinct and separate matter deserving consideration in its own rights."

Dr. Casberg states that even if dependent care were eliminated, a doctor-draft law would still be necessary. "The care of dependents," he relates, "represents only a fraction of the projected medical work load during the present period of national emergency."

He continues thusly in the important editorial, certain to receive widespread attention in military and civilian medical circles: "Whether or not we are faced with the issue of drafting doctors, there still exists a very real problem in dependent care, a separate and distinct matter of extreme importance, effects of which on the lives of those in uniform, and hence the national security run through the very warp and woof of the foundations of our Armed Forces.

"A matter of such far-reaching significance warrants an exhaustive study by a commission made up of members of the highest national reputation and integrity—civilian and military, doctor and layman.

"The Armed Forces," Dr. Casberg says, "neither have the inherent right nor the desire to use the question of dependent care as a bargaining commodity in a hasty effort to redeem, as it were, this hostage held in security for the support of another important legislative measure.

"We might well pause in serious reflection," Dr. Casberg comments, "before encumbering the doctor draft law with prohibitions relative to dependent care, for such limitations might work serious professional, educational and geographic restrictions on certain categories drafted into the Armed Forces. As a medical reserve officer recently stated, a practice limited primarily to young men would certainly produce a serious degree of professional dissatisfaction.

"Never before in our military medical history," concludes Dr. Casberg, "has there existed such a high level of professional achievement and never before have the bonds of sincere mutual interest and respect between civilian and military professions been so strong. In the interests of the further advancement of our medical status and to further strengthen our national security, there is urgent need for clear unprejudiced thinking on the part of the leaders of American medicine, both in and out of uniform, lest we in hasty action jeopardize our present high level of accomplishment."

Sen. Douglas Hits "Lavish Living"

THERE was much Service activity on Capitol Hill this week as the Senate Armed Services Committee held hearings on Defense nominations and the House Armed Services Committee heard testimony on the Davis Amendment. Numerous bills affecting the Services were introduced, as reported in the Calendar of Legislation (page 673).

Meantime, there was evidence that the attacks against the Services which were so evident in the 82d Congress must be expected in the 83d. It is going to be interesting to see whether or not the new Pentagon leadership resists blunderbuss criticism of the Services and military personnel.

ALLEGED "LAVISH LIVING" of U. S. military personnel in Europe must stop, according to Senator Paul Douglas (D-Ill.), who 10 months ago proposed a 50% reduction in overseas allowances. He praised an article in the February issue of American Magazine called "G.I. Joe: Europe's New Royalty." Senator Douglas, who can be expected to attack the Services when the 1954 budget is discussed, said "the lavish living of American personnel in Europe and elsewhere must stop." He said he hoped the American people will be shocked into action. His remarks are strikingly opposite to recent comments of civilian defense leaders that steps must be taken to improve the welfare of military personnel overseas.

NINETEEN SENATORS, led by Herbert H. Lehman (D-NY) have introduced legislation which would make unprovoked violence against uniformed members of the Armed Forces a Federal offense. The bill was originally introduced in 1944. Members of the Coast Guard already are protected by such legislation, as are game wardens, marshals and meat inspectors, Senator Lehman observed. An identical bill was supported by the Defense Department in the 82d Congress.

DRAFT SERVICE will not be extended from 24 to 36 months as has been widely rumored, Representative James E. Van Zandt (R-Pa.) of the House Armed Services Committee said this week. He issued a statement to refute reports he was going to sponsor legislation to increase the active duty of draftees. Recently returned from Korea after seven weeks' active duty as a Naval Reserve Officer, Mr. Van Zandt said he has no knowledge of any other member of Congress planning such legislation.

Basil O'Connor (left), president of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, presents a citation of honor to Brig. Gen. Wilford F. Hall, Military Air Transport Service air surgeon. NFFIP made the award in recognition of MATS cooperation during the past two years "in transferring polio patients for treatment and in flying essential equipment into epidemic areas during emergencies."

"Ways to Change the Enemy's Mind"

SECRETARY of State Dulles' forecast of ten days ago, that President Eisenhower would "find ways to change the enemy's mind" about the desirability of prolonging the war, begins to be borne out, more quickly than expected, by the President's State-of-the-Union speech of last Monday. The outstanding item, by popular esteem in this country (and anxious flutters abroad) was announcement that the Seventh U. S. Fleet will no longer provide Red China with protection from raids by the Nationalist Chinese, one of the numerous missions assigned to the Fleet by presidential directive in mid-1950—and wisely at that time. But times have changed, and requirements too.

ADM. RADFORD

An automatic inference is that, so far as we are concerned, Nationalist China hereafter is free to make against the Red coast north and south of Amoy the hit-and-run-raids which Chiang's followers have insistently said they wished to make. To protect the coastal towns against these raids, if they take place, Red China now can use its own resources, instead of employing them in Korea or in other Communist adventures to the south. Peking's initial response was a radio warning against America's "extension" of the Korean war.

NOW NOBODY EXPECTS the Chinese Nationalists to start out with a proper invasion next week. Formosa holds still a number of sailors and aviators and amphibians, plus two well-equipped infantry divisions (with more in sight ultimately through a combination of Maj. Gen. William C. Chase's USMAG advisers and the additional American equipment promised) but invasion would call for more than that in manpower and for a great deal more in the way of ships and landing craft and planes and invasion materiel and supplies. American escort destroyers and a few landing craft which were hauled off to Formosa in the Nationalists' hasty evacuation of the mainland were old stuff, and they have grown no newer. We remain cautious about itemizing this equipment publicly, although it is safe to say that Red China knows a great deal more about Formosan readiness than does the American public. Let us surmise only that Red China is not greatly worried about any nearby attempts on Chiang's part to establish a true bridgehead.

Nevertheless, raids by relatively small forces could do a good deal to shake Communist complacency, and the fear of them could easily require Peiping to concern itself with defenses against such unpleasant events; to do so would presumably call for shifting men and materiel from Korea to the south. And this in itself could raise in Chinese minds the question of whether Chiang's present known resources are going to be increased (a good deal has been said of that), and whether, after all, raids in force might not be succeeded by sizable attacks on hitherto secure areas which Peiping is very anxious not to be upset. And while President Eisenhower's declaration clearly "implies no aggressive intention on our part," it is possible that Communist memories recall a certain declaration of January 1950 suggesting that America would not fight to defend South Korea! We changed our minds on that one.

Another item in Monday's declaration of a "new, positive foreign policy" was little less dramatic, also considered, for it stated that "mutual security means effective mutual cooperation"; that in turn means that the United States "shall give help to other nations in the measure that they strive earnestly to do their full share of the common task; no wealth of aid could compensate for poverty of spirit; the heart of every free nation must be honestly dedicated to the preserving of its own independence and security." The President gave warm praise of those enlightened European leaders who have sustained the free world's security all the way out to Southeast Asia or have done so much to advance the Schuman Plan, the European Army and the Strasbourg Conference, against large obstacles at home. But he stated firmly that still closer cooperation in western Europe must be achieved.

This statement was important in itself, and important in its timing, for the speech coincided with the arrival of Mr. Dulles and Mr. Harold E. Stassen, Mutual Security Administrator, in Paris en route to London, and then to Bonn. The early reports of that voyage are encouraging. The Americans, obviously following instructions as well as their own sound judgments, are listening rather than lecturing. Mr. Dulles' widely publicized and televised remarks to the American public on the eve of his departure, plus the President's firm declarations in his Inaugural and later in Monday's speech, have clearly impressed Europeans deeply. That was the intent. "The needed unity of Western Europe manifestly cannot be manufactured from without; it can only be created from within," in the President's words. All these firm declarations have helped to make Europe understand that Congress, which makes appropriations, must be willing to do so.

THE STATE-OF-THE-UNION ADDRESS was a good speech for home consumption, too, and it will be a fortunate thing if the first of the President's "certain fixed ideas" is kept in mind by all: "Our foreign policy must be clear, consistent, and confident. This means that it must be the product of genuine, continuous cooperation between the Executive and the Legislative branches of this government; it must be developed in the spirit of true bipartisanship."

To return to Mr. Dulles, it is a little early to appraise the results of his journey in any Rock of the Marne Birthday—The famous 30th (Rock of the Marne) Infantry Regiment observed its 140th anniversary at Ft. Benning, Ga., on 29 Jan. Col. Frank L. Elder is commander.

The 30th Infantry Regiment, stationed at Ft. Benning since 1 Dec. 1948, was organized 29 Jan. 1813, to fight the British in the War of 1812. It was consolidated with a light artillery battalion in 1815.

President Abraham Lincoln recalled the 30th to active duty 4 May 1861, to participate in the Civil War. It remained in an active status until March 1869, when it was consolidated with the Fourth Infantry Regiment. The present 30th was formed 12 Feb. 1901, to fight in the Aguinaldo Insurrection in the Philippines and has been active since that time.

Security Agency Chief Retires—Maj. Gen. Robinson Earl Duff retired on 31 Jan. after 35 years' Army service. He was 58 on 18 Jan.

Chief of the Army Security Agency since August 1951, he is a graduate of the Command and General Staff School and the Army War College.

General Duff served in Italy as Assistant Division Commander, 10th Mountain Division and in the Philippines as Deputy Chief of the U. S. Army Service Command Coronet. In this capacity he also served with the occupation forces in Japan. In Europe he served as Assistant Division Commander, 9th Infantry Division, and Commanding General, Frankfurt Military Post. Duty with the General Staff, D/A included assignments as Chief, Depot Section, G-4, and Deputy Director, Plans and Operations Division, G-3. General and Mrs. Duff plan to reside in their recently completed home at 7706 Lake View Drive, Falls Church, Va.

Jet Transports—While we are well on our way toward making jet transports a "real thing," we should realize that we are not as ready for the jet transport as it is ready for us, declared Lt. Gen. Joseph Smith, USAF, commander of MATS, in an address at the Institute of Aeronautical Sciences 3 Feb. in Washington, D. C.

"The military services," General Smith said, "have not had experience in a steady day-to-day, hour-to-hour jet type operation that is required of scheduled transport. So far, we in the USAF have been fortunate enough to be able to tailor our jet flights to suit the weather and other factors."

"Not everyone appreciates the peculiar performance characteristics that render the jet-propelled aircraft of today less able to cope with certain conditions in the atmosphere than are propeller-driven aircraft. Even fewer people realize how these characteristics introduce requirements for weather service and information unheard of heretofore."

General Smith pointed out that there is no reason why the military and civilian carriers cannot get together and come up with a parallel set of characteristics and requirements which will make possible the early availability of suitable low cost jet transports to both of them.

At the same meeting Mr. Milton W. Arnold, vice president of the Air Transport Association, declared that there are no inherent mysteries about jet transports. "Several have been built," he said, "and it would be easy enough to build a better one without delay. The basic problem is that no one has yet been able to build a turbine-powered aircraft which can pay its own way. Though the airlines are fully cognizant of the long-range possibilities of jet power, it is not economically sound for them to make large capital investments in jet transports at the present stage of their development."

Military Names In The News—Col. John W. Carpenter III has been named chief of staff of the Air Force's Air Research and Development Command. Formerly vice chief of staff, he succeeds Brig. Gen. Samuel R. Harris, jr., who is now commanding general of the Air Research and Development Command's Arnold Engineering Development Center, Tullahoma, Tenn.

Col. Charles B. Kendall, 61, head of the Army Hospital at Ft. Bragg, N. C., retired from active duty 31 Jan. after 48 years of military service. He retired last year, but agreed to stay on for an additional year as Post surgeon because of the shortage of top-ranking medical officers.

Brig. Gen. Max S. Johnson, until recently deputy commandant of the Command and General Staff College, Ft. Leavenworth, Kans., is being assigned to United States Army Forces, Far East.

Lt. Glenn D. Crawford piloted the first Air Force cargo of aid supplies to flood-stricken Netherlands. The plane was attached to the 41st Troop Carrier squadron based at Rhine-Main AFB, Germany.

Capt. Robert B. Hielig, formerly assigned to the Bureau of Ordnance, Navy Department, Washington, D. C., has succeeded Capt. William D. Irvin as commanding officer of the USS Adirondack, a command communications ship stationed in Naples, Italy.

Maj. David G. Simons has succeeded Lt. J. D. Telfer as director of the Space Biology Field Laboratory at Holloman AFB, N. Mex.

Canadian Air Marshal W. A. Curtis, Chief of the Air Staff for the past five years, retired from service, 31 Jan. Air Marshal Curtis saw service in the Navy, Army and Air Force during his long career.

...Members of the House Appropriations Committee are encountering understandable difficulties insofar as BUDGET ATTRIBUTIONS are concerned. During hearings this week the supplemental '53 funds asked by Mr. Truman, Republican members stressed that this was not "the President's request." The Democrats insisted it was a Presidential request. Meantime, it was learned on Capitol Hill that the Budget Bureau Director (Eisenhower's not Truman's) has not reviewed the supplemental estimates. Altogether, it's a confusing situation, Committee members of both parties say, and it could get worse when the '54 budget hearings begin.

Wives of top commanders from military bases in the Columbus, Ohio, area discuss plans with Mrs. Frank J. Lausche, wife of Ohio's Governor, for a gala Military March of Dimes Ball held on 6 Feb. Pictured from left to right are: Mrs. Charles B. Dougher; Mrs. Lausche; Mrs. D. S. McConaughy, and Mrs. A. L. Pettitjean.

Service Wives Join Hands At Columbus, Ohio, To Raise Thousands of Dollars For March of Dimes

Sparked by Officer and Noncommissioned Officers Wives Clubs, military installations throughout the United States this year—as in many years past—raised scores of thousands of dollars for the March of Dimes.

Among the outstanding activities to aid the drive against polio was the joint Army-Navy-Air Force-Marine Corps effort in the Columbus, Ohio, area, highlighted by a Military March of Dimes Ball last night, 6 Feb.

The dance had two objectives—to raise funds for the March of Dimes campaign and at the same time bring the members of all Services together for an evening of social enjoyment.

The Service wives won the support of Ohio's charming first lady, Jane Lausche, and her husband, Governor Frank J. Lausche.

The Military Ball took place in one of Columbus' leading hotels—the Neil House—and was attended not only by the military of the area but by Governor and Mrs. Lausche, Columbus' Mayor Robert T. Oestreicher and wife, plus many other civic and political leaders.

The wives hoped that the ball would raise from $8,000 to $12,000 dollars for the local chapter of the Polio foundation. Tickets were sold for $5 per couple for officers and Civil Service employees, and $3 per couple for enlisted personnel and ROTC cadets from central Ohio colleges and universities.

Both the ballroom and the music for the special dance was contributed free. The Air Force Dance Band from Bolling AFB, otherwise known as The Airmen of Note, and the Naval band from Memphis, Tenn., alternately played for the ball.

The four top commanders of the Army-Navy-Air Force-Marine Corps bases in the area kicked off the ticket sales campaign when Col. Charles B. Dougher from the 801st Air Division at Lockbourne AFB sold the first ticket to Governor Lausche, and Capt. L. O. Matthews from the Port Columbus Naval Air Station made the second sale to Mayor Oestreicher.

But even for this initial sales work, the wives paved the way. Their preliminary spade work included attending a special tea in the Governor's Mansion where they discussed detailed plans for the ball with Mrs. Lausche and the Mayor's wife, who also was a guest.

Leading the discussion at the tea were Mrs. D. S. McConaughy, wife of Brig. Gen. McConaughy of the Columbus General Depot; Mrs. Charles B. Dougher, wife of Col. Dougher; Mrs. A. L. Pettitjean, whose husband is Comdr. Pettitjean of the Port Columbus Naval Air Station, and Mrs. R. D. Winn, wife of Capt. Winn of the Marine Corps training center in Columbus.

Other wives of military personnel who visited the Governor's home were:

From Lockbourne, Mrs. Lewis E. Lyle, Mrs. William H. Edwards, Mrs. Cecil S. Shelton, Mrs. Thomas L. Barrere and Mrs. Fred C. Eichorn;

From the Air Force Recruiting Station in Columbus, Mrs. Walter H. Saxton and Mrs. William A. Young; from Fort Hayes, Mrs. H. G. Paullin, Mrs. Edward J. Daley, Mrs. Jack Colvin, Mrs. Hobart S. Holland and Mrs. Carl A. Miller;

From Columbus General Depot, Mrs. James E. Winterbottom, Mrs. Edgar J. Price and Mrs. Don W. Stricklin;

From the Naval Air Station, Port Columbus, Mrs. W. P. Dunham, Mrs. C. H. Martin, Mrs. Richard Bick, Mrs. Harland Miller, Mrs. Leonard Kruse, and Mrs. William Miles;

From the Naval Training Center, Mrs. Clarence Dean and Mrs. A. J. Halliday;

From the Naval Recruiting Station, Mrs. David Roulston and Mrs. Peter Van Hooser; and from NROTC, Mrs. J. R. Clark, Mrs. J. B. Flynn and Mrs. H. R. Lindstrom.

FT. EUSTIS, VA. Campaigning for the 1953 March of Dimes drive, the Officers' Wives' Club held a Benefit Bridge-Canasta Party, 29 Jan.

Price of admission was $1 a person with six door prizes awarded to the holders of lucky ticket numbers. Prizes were also given to the high scorer of each table and the high and low scorers of both bridge and canasta.

Bridge prizes were won by Mrs. William A. Dunkum, first; Mrs. James M. Sprake, second, and Mrs. Johnnie Duffie, low prize. Mrs. F. W. Dies received first, and Mrs. William W. Baldwin, low prize for canasta. Merchants of Newport News and Hilton Village contributed prizes for the occasion.

Proceeds from the party amounted to $91.50, which will be added to the Fort Eustis contribution for the March of Dimes. Mrs. James F. Hooper, chairman; Mrs. John N. Albrow, and Mrs. E. J. Conley, members of the Ways and Means Committee were in charge of arrangements.

FT. BENNING, GA. Six officers leave 10 Feb. for a winter indoctrination course at Northway, Alaska, near the Yukon border. They are Lt. Col. Isaac W. Cundiff, Maj. Larry W. Coker, Capt. George V. Morse, Jr., Capt. John B. Wadsworth, Capt. John C. Wallman, and Lt. Col. A. F. MacDonald.

Purpose of the course is to acquaint officers with problems they would likely encounter in tactical operations in the Arctic zone at extremely low temperatures.

MARCH OF DIMES SALUTED

Infantry officer candidates at Ft. Benning, Ga., broke tradition last week and enriched the March of Dimes Drive by $98.

Instead of giving $1 to the first enlisted man to salute him, each of the newly-commissioned lieutenants donated the money to the dimes drive.

The new second lieutenants postponed the bar pinning ceremony following their graduation until they returned to their company area. There they filed past 1st Sgt. Cecil T. Davis, who took the donations as they returned his salute. Sergeant Davis is credited with originating the idea of turning over the money to the campaign.

Colonel Sinnott was born in Nashville, Tenn., 2 Oct. 1888. Upon the outbreak of World War I, she volunteered for service in France and organized the Vanderbilt University Unit of some 30 doctors and 20 nurses. This unit sailed from N. Y. on 22 Dec. 1917, with Colonel Sinnott in charge of some 100 nurses. Upon arrival in France, Colonel Sinnott was assigned to duty as Chief Nurse of The Army Hospital Center at Savenay, where eight Base Hospitals with 1,000 beds each were located.

After serving 26 months in France, which included a tour of duty with Headquarters in Paris, Colonel Sinnott was returned to the U. S. After a short tour of duty at Ft. Dix, N. J., she was ordered to Washington, D. C. for duty in The Surgeon General's Office. She next went to the Army dispensary, Munitions Building, Washington, as Chief Nurse after which she was for three years Chief Nurse in EENT operating room at Walter Reed Hospital.

On 20 March 1923, on the steps of The State War and Navy Building in Washington, the DSM was pinned on the uniform of Colonel Sinnott, by General of The Armies, John J. Pershing.

In 1935 she was ordered to Brooke Gen. Hospital, Ft. Sam Houston, Tex., as assistant to Maj. Julia O. Flickle, later Superintendent of Army Nurses, who had asked for her.

In October 1941 she was ordered to Camp

Blanding, Fla., under Col. L. R. Poust, MC, as Chief Nurse of a 2,000 bed hospital. When Colonel Poust was ordered to command the newly established, Hammond Gen. Colonel Sinnott was promoted to Assistant Superintendent ANC with the rank of Lt. Col., 23 June 1944, and was retired for disability at Letterman General Hospital Presidio of S.F. 11 Dec. 1945. Slate T-43 Production

Assembly line production of the Army's big T-43 heavy tank will get underway soon at Newark, Del., officials of the Chrysler Corporation announced this week.

The T-43 will mount a 120 mm gun, the heaviest ever carried on a high speed tank. Specifications on the T-43 haven't been made public yet, but it is expected to be America's answer to the Russian 57-ton Stalin 111 tank.

Industrial College Advisers

Rear Adm. W. McL. Hague, USN, Commandant of the Industrial College of the Armed Forces, has announced the appointment of William M. Allen of Seattle, Mark Edwin Andrews of Houston, and Alexander R. Heron of San Francisco as members of the College Board of Advisers.

Mr. Allen, president of Boeing Airplane Company, producer of the B29 and B47 and developer of the B52 for the Air Force will advise regarding military production problems.

Mr. Andrews, lawyer, former Assistant Secretary of the Navy, responsible for procurement, and author of "Buying a Navy," is an authority on military procurement.

Mr. Heron is vice president and director of Crown-Zellerbach Corporation, and a lecturer and author in advanced management and industrial relations. During World War II, he was with the War Production Board, War Manpower Commission, and War Department. During the present defense mobilization he was an industry member of the Wage Stabilization Board. He will provide guidance in the manpower and economic stabilization areas of the College's economic mobilization courses.

The three new appointments bring the membership of the Board of Advisers to 18 civilian leaders from industry, education, finance and other sectors of the national economy.

Sabrejet Bomber For TAC

The first North American F-86F to be used by Tactical Air Command for training fighter bomber crews was delivered 29 Jan. to the 50th Fighter Bomber Wing at Clovis AFB, N. M., General John K. Cannon, TAC commanding general, has announced.

The 50th, commanded by Col. Wallace S. Ford, is assigned to TAC's Ninth Air Force, other wings of which have F-86F jet aircraft programmed for the future.

Designed for speeds in excess of 650 m.p.h., the F-86F has wing and tail assemblies that are swept back at a 35 degree angle. It is a modification of the North American F-86 "Sabre" aircraft in which U.S. Air Force pilots have made a nine to one victory record in air battles with Russian-built MIG-15's over Korea.

These new jet fighter bombers will replace the F-51 "Mustang" which the 50th has used since it was ordered to active military service in October 1950. The 50th, formerly the 140th Fighter Bomber Wing, was redesignated in January.

Study Marine Promotion

A study which would place Marine Corps promotion procedures at least in part back under the Officer Personnel Act of 1947 currently is being reviewed and commented on by various agencies at Marine Corps Headquarters.

At present Corps promotions are being made under the terms of the temporary promotion act of World War II. However, Maj. Gen. Walter W. Wensinger, Deputy Chief of Staff, told a House Armed Services Committee professional staff late last year that the Corps is "studying the possibilities of return to the OPA in whole or in part, with particular attention being given to a system of concurrent promotions under both authorities."

THE JOURNAL learned this week from Brig. Gen. Nels H. Nelson, Assistant Chief of Staff, G-1, that the study "is still under consideration" but "no definite decisions have been made." General Nelson said the study "was made by members of the Commandant's staff and is being commented on by interested agencies in Headquarters Marine Corps."

He noted, however, that the recommendations must be approved by the Commandant as well as the Secretary of the Navy and the President.

At the same time THE JOURNAL learned that the Corps does not plan to convene a board for the selection of new colonels prior to 1 July. No board was held during calendar year 1952 for promotion to that rank.

From time to time, rumor has indicated that the Corps is studying the possibility of holding "split" promotion boards—one for ground officers and one for aviators in each rank. This week Headquarters said a proposal regarding "split list" or category promotions has been under consideration at Marine Corps Headquarters but "no study on this subject has been completed."

Army Unit At U. of Chicago

Fifth Army Headquarters has activated a second Strategic Intelligence Research and Analysis unit at the University of Chicago.

The S.I.R.A. Reserve units are affiliated with industrial concerns, universities, and other organizations. Their personnel is composed of experts in various fields whose specialized knowledge is of military value. "Early-ready" units, they are subject to active duty on 30 days' notice.

The new unit is commanded by Maj. Jack Howard, professor of business administration at the University of Chicago. The first unit there was organized by Lt. Col. Graham Aldis, trustee of the university and president of Aldis and Company, Chicago. Col. Douglas Waples, MI-USAR, and professor of international communication, is now its commanding officer. Other officers and enlisted men are members of the faculty or student body at the University.

detail. But his stay of slightly over two days in Paris (the longest halt in his voyage) appears to have been profitable, for the dispatches have referred repeatedly to assurances from MM. Mayer and Bidault that every effort will be exerted to obtain ratification of the European Defense Community compact, and of the contractual agreement with Germany. This is a different attitude from that of a month ago, and the change is welcome. While in Paris, of course, Messrs. Dulles and Stassen met with General Ridgway and with his ground force deputy, the plain-speaking Marshal Juin; they also attended the weekly meeting at NATO Council headquarters.

THE AMERICANS' ARRIVAL IN LONDON was on the heels of a Commons interpellation of Anthony Eden on the matter of the President's order to the Seventh Fleet. Mr. Eden stated that he had been informed in advance of the intention, and had expressed anxiety about "unfortunate political repercussions without compensating military advantage." This attitude was not unexpected, and we must exercise great patience and understanding. The odd Hongkong relationship is not without interest to us, for in that community is one of the largest sounding boards we know, and it is worth paying something for. For that matter, the early dispatches from Malaya, India, Indonesia, Indo-China, and even Japan indicate varying degrees of anxiety about whether our Formosan Straits decision could lead to an extension of the war; we will see more and more that the affair is not a purely bilateral one. Our action is a bold one and, so far as yet disclosed, a wise one.

On two successive days Soviet authorities communicated to Denmark their official displeasure with that small country; first because of Denmark's "hostile preparations against Russia" by planning to permit foreign troops on Danish soil; second because an independent radio station in Denmark was putting on a show descriptive of NATO, Denmark's responsive action, significantly, was to ask General Ridgway to shift NATO troops so as to afford fuller protection to Denmark's southeastern frontier—which lies only 70 miles from Soviet forces occupying West Germany; the Foreign Minister at the same time gave informal assurance that U. S. Air Force units would be allowed to operate from two of the projected seven bases in Denmark.

The request for more troops springs from necessity. Denmark continues to keep a battalion northwest of Hamburg, but this force, up to now, has had the considerable support of a Norwegian r.c.t. in nearby Schleswig-Holstein (the region long in dispute between Denmark and Germany). Norway's element is to be withdrawn in May, to become the core of one of the two larger defense elements being organized for north and south Norway. Denmark's resultant request is for a brigade, perhaps Canadian, to take its place in Schleswig-Holstein. It can be seen that the situation has political as well as military aspects, and General Ridgway presumably will deal with the request on that level.
